"That bracelet was gold," said Mrs.
Arnold, mysteriously, her naturally large, white eyes expanding to an unusual size. "It was gold and worth a heap. Now, gold bracelets don't walk off of their own accord."

"I'm a goin' to search every thing about this house," said Hallie.
"I would," reassured the mother.
"I am a goin' to search that girl's things, too."

"Yes, I would," said Mrs. Arnold, sitting in her chair and bobbing her head approvingly.

"If you can't find it anywhere else search her, but search every place first; I am not going to have a thief about my house," said the firm father at the front door of the house, snapping his whip at some vines.

"Well, it's nowhere here," said Hallie, her red face assuming a look of vexation. "Now I'm going to the kitchen. Look in that girl's carpet bag."

"Oh, no," said the mother, a faint smile on her face. "It will make Helen mad."

"I don't care. I am going to have my bracelet," said her mother, close after her, she bolted in the kitchen. "Helen," she said, "I'm going to look among your things."

"What for?" the astonished girl asked.

"My gold bracelet, worth twenty dollars, is gone."

"Well, Miss Arnold, I have not got it," cried Helen, her eyes flashing.

"I will see for myself," said she,
and she seized the old carpet bag which sat where Helen had placed it that morning. Tearing it open, she pulled out the clothing of Helen and her brother, much to the indignation of the "bird girl." Hallie's mother stood in the doorway entreating her daughter to desist.

"No, I won't," and she jerked out a small bundle of handkerchiefs which unrolled, and something bright and heavy fell upon the floor. It was a gold bracelet. Hallie's mother picked it up in triumph, but Helen was dumb with astonishment.

A cry from mother and daughter brought Mr. Arnold to the kitchen.
"She—she is the thief," cried Hallie, holding up the bracelet and pointing to Helen.

A mist came before Helen's eyes, her head swam and she sank insensible to the floor.

CHAPTER X.
THE ARREST.

The tableaux was a striking one.
Mrs. Arnold held both hands in horror; Hallie stood triumphant with her bracelet in one hand, and the finger of scorn pointed at Helen, who sank before her awful accusation.

Mr. Arnold, who was calm and unmoved. He knew his duty as a good citizen in such cases, and allowed no foolish emotions to come between himself and that duty.

Little Amos, who had only partially realized what had happened, and yet knew it was something terrible, burst into tears. Mr. Arnold, with features as importunate as stone, walked toward the boy and, laying a hand so heavy upon his shoulders as to almost bend the little body double, said:

"See here, sir, we want none of that noise, do you understand me now? You just hush that up."

"Oh, sister—sister is dead," sobbed the child.

"No, she is not. She will recover soon enough; now you must keep quiet." Turning to his wife, who stood in a stupefied manner at the door, her face turned upward, he added: "You had better look now and see what else is gone. We don't know but half the silverware is stolen."

"Oh, sister, sister!" cried the little boy, sobbing and holding his outstretched hands toward the insensible Helen.

"Had I not better do something to restore her?" asked Mrs. Arnold, who was really agitated.

"No, she will recover soon enough —all that is put on."

"Let me sprinkle a little water in her face?"

"Hunt your silver spoons," cried Mr.
Arnold, "and let her alone. I'll warrant she'll recover all right."

The suggestion to sprinkle some water in her face seemed to strike the boy favorably, and he began to struggle from the chair in which he was sitting. Either the excitement or partial paralysis of his limbs caused him to fall from the chair to the floor.

"Oh my back! I have hurt my back," cried the little cripple. No one seemed to care if he had, though the child cried out with the most intense agony.

could not keep little Amos from shedding tears over his sister.

Helen began to revive. She started up in a dazed sort of way, uncolored and unrefreshed by any one save her crippled brother. She made an effort to rise to her feet, and, finding her head dizzy, sank down in a chair and placing her arm around the back, laid her head upon it and sobbed violently.

"Sister, sister!" cried little Amos, who was now unconscious of the pain his back gave him, "do look up!—are you better?"

"SISTER! SISTER!" HE CRIED, MOST PITIFULLY.

"She'll be better soon," said the deep rasping voice of Mr. Arnold, while his chin seemed a degree higher in the air, and his mouth was close as steel trap.

Helen heard the bitter taunt, and all her noble soul aroared, she cried:

"Judge Arnold, I never put that bracelet in my carpet-bag. I never stole it, I am innocent, and you know it."

"Oh, yes," and the chin and short roan whiskers rose higher. "I have seen many as equally innocent; I never heard one plead guilty on the first accusation."

"Some of your own family put that jewel in my carpet bag to ruin me," sobbed Helen.

"O dear," cried Hallie, with triumphantly scornful.

"That's an old dodge," said the man in the doorway. "A thief is always imagining that somebody's trying to ruin his character. Now, that bracelet is worth twenty dollars; you will have to explain how the stolen property got into your possession, or you may get into trouble."

"Judge Arnold," said Helen, rising and bringing all the energy which she felt in her case required at her command, "I swear, so help me Heaven that I never touched that bracelet since my mother owned it. It was put in my carpet bag by other hands than mine."

"Helen Lakeman," said Mrs. Arnold, confronting the beautiful girl, with her head high in the air, "it is bad enough for you to steal a bracelet without adding perjury to your crime."

Helen was shocked. She realized how hopeless was her condition. She had been completely trapped. Every thing was against her, and yet she was innocent. It was no use to accuse these people, whose standing in society was higher than her own, of putting the bracelet in her carpet bag to ruin her. No one would believe her.

Helen, with a firmness born of despair, sat down in her chair again.
All the emotion attendant upon the first shock being gone, she was calm.
Her calmness could be called either conscious innocence, or the brazen indifference of a guilty soul.

"Do your worst," she said, "I am in your power."

"What do you think we would want to ruin your character for?" sneered Hallie, rubbing her bracelet to get on the stain of the "thief's" fingers. "Do you suppose we find you in our way?"

Helen was silent. It was useless to exchange words with these people.

"I don't think a young girl of sixteen who comes in after dark through the rain with a peddler can have much character to be proud of," said Mrs.
Arnold, her head turned upward and sideways, so that she might get a view of the culprit's face from beneath her glasses.

"That's what you get by takin' such trash in your house," said the stern man at the door, his chin coming up again.

"We can go now if you wish to get rid of us," said Helen.

"Oh, no, don't trouble yourself. We don't want to get rid of you just yet, so you need not hurry yourself."

"Do you mean, Judge Arnold, that I am to be arrested for this?" Helen asked, calmly.

"I am inclined to the opinion you will," the Judge answered. "The farmer was called Judge Helen did not know. Titles are cheap, and the number of colonels, judges, and generals we have in our country is astonishing, and the list increases every day."

"Then, sir," said Helen, "I will wait here. I am innocent, and know that God is my goodness will, in some way, see that I am vindicated."

"You had better depend upon Him, for He is the only one who can do you any good," said the stern man, with an irreverent wit, which he enjoyed.

Helen again relapsed into silence, and her little brother, groaning with pain, drew a chair up by her side, climbed into it and lay down with his head in her lap. She folded her arms about him, feeling that it was the last time in life she would ever be permitted to take him to her heart.

Mrs. Arnold, having satisfied herself that nothing else was gone, was called out by her husband, and the door closed and locked. The hired man was left as guard, and Mr. Arnold got into his carriage and drove away to Newton alone. Helen sat there with the little boy head in her lap. Great tears arose in her eyes, and she tried to pray, but could not; God would surely not desert her. She had read of so many persons punished for crimes they had never committed that she feared she must suffer for this. Her heart was not one of those romantic girls who wished to be a heroine or a martyr. She was content to live humbly, to have no mission save that of helping her crippled brother. The child closed his feverish eyes and slept. "Sleep on, little brother," said Helen, softly, "Heaven only knows where your little head will rest to-night."

She did not weep now, her great calmness had dried up the fountain of her grief. But silent, cold and determined, she sat there, trying to bring herself to face the inevitable.

"If they will only let me take my brother with me, I shall not murmur," she said to herself.

Then she thought of the tempest of the day before. How much better it would have been if both herself and brother had been killed by the "lightning" than lived to see this day. What evil had brought her to this house. A natural chain of reflections brought Pete, the peddler, to her memory.
Where was Pete now. Doubtless many miles on his way with his heavy pack, trudging along the road. Pete had promised to befriend her—would he do it?

Most of all, she thought of Warren.
Would he ever at his avowed love for her when he heard of her disgrace.
Somehow the bitterest pang she felt was that Warren would hear of her fall. The future was dark—black. She knew whither Mr. Arnold had gone.
He would return in three or four hours with the sheriff and a warrant for herself.

Little Amos slept on, his last sleep in his sister's arms. Helen could not disturb him, and when his hacking cough seemed likely to arouse him, she gently rocked him in her arms. "Poor little fellow, sleep while you can, sleep while you can," she said, sadly. At last, she heard the rockaway of Mr.
Arnold drive up to the front gate, and looking out at the window, saw that gentleman and a large, dark-whiskered man get out. The dark-whiskered man was the sheriff, Mr. Joe Belcher.

"Come right in," said Mr. Arnold, who seemed to have a disagreeable matter in hand, which he wished to dispose of at once.

Little Amos stirred uneasily, as though he was receiving a warning in his sleep of what was to come. Helen awoke him gently.

"Wake up, little brother, they have come."

"Who?" asked the feverish boy; "I don't want nobody to come."

But the heavy tread of feet in the hall awoke the little fellow to silence again. The key was turned, the door opened and Mr. Arnold conducted the sheriff into the kitchen, and, pointing to Helen, said:

"The sheriff then drew a chair up to her side, and drawing a legal looking document from the breast pocket of his coat, began to read:

"State of — and County of —.
One James Arnold, makes oath and says, etc., that one Helen Lakeman, late of said county, did, on the fifth day of June, 1886, at said county, then and there being, one gold bracelet of the goods and chattels of Miss Hallie Arnold, then and there being, of the value of twenty dollars, did then and there, with force and arms, knowingly, willfully and feloniously steal the same, and carry away, against the dignity of the State. These are to command you, etc., etc."

CHAPTER XI.
THE SEPARATION.

Helen sat like one stupefied while the warrant was read. The voice of the sheriff quivered, for his honest heart told him the girl was not guilty, and then, when he looked at the wretched child on her lap and from the faces of each read their suffering, he mentally exclaimed:

"I swear the girl can't be blamed if she did steal it."

Little Amos looked inquiringly into his sister's pale, stone-like face at the conclusion of the reading of the warrant, as if to ask what it all meant.
Helen was silent—stunned—although she had been all morning preparing for the blow. The sheriff carefully folded the document and thrust it into his side pocket, and sat in silence, as though he hardly knew what to do next.

Helen at last turned her awfully white face upon him. She spoke in a gently pleading tone, and said: "Next she turned her face upon Judge Arnold, who stood in the doorway. Arnold struggled with all the power he possessed to meet her stare, but was compelled to cover before the gaze of injured innocence. At length her lips moved, and her voice was so hollow as to startle Arnold.

"Do you believe that I am guilty of that charge?" she asked.

Arnold was for a moment confused.
He was afraid to risk his voice to say he did, lest his tongue might fail to speak, and yet he dare not say he believed her innocent. He had sworn out the warrant and must believe what he stated.

"I have no conversation for you," he said, elevating his chin in the air,
"you are now in the sheriff's hands, and your case is beyond my control."

"Oh, God, that I had only kept beyond your control!" cried Helen, breaking down at last and sobbing violently.

"To be robbed by you of our home, and every thing that would have made myself and this poor afflicted child comfortable, and then because I asked shelter for one night under your roof, to have yourself or your family seek my ruin in this way—oh, God, help me ere I get beyond the power of forgiving!" With a last wail, Helen threw herself forward and bowed her head upon a table near by.

"Don't cry, sister, don't," sobbed the little cripple, while the tears rolled down his cheeks, "they shan't hurt you. God won't let 'em hurt you."

The sheriff, a frown on his brow, for this was a perplexing case, arose and began walking the kitchen floor. "He was troubled, but, like a brave official, resolved to do his duty. Mr. Arnold stood patiently at the door. He had just caught sight of his wife, who stood at the door of the dining room. She was, perhaps, the most hard-hearted woman in the county, and yet weak and unable to bear witness any great display of feeling. Mrs. Arnold's face was high in the air, but greatly agitated.

Mr. Arnold was impatient to have this "scene," as he called it, over with.
"I say, Belcher," he said, "why don't you take her on and stop that howling; I swear I don't want such an uproar in my house."

By-the-way, a sensational story that Jesse James was still living in the wilds of Arkansas appeared in the papers Wednesday. The Ford assassination was pronounced a ruse, but the story sounds decidedly fishy.

The dead-lock in the Indiana Legislature on the Senatorial question continues unchanged. One or two ballots taken every day show 75 votes for Turpie, 71 for Harrison and 4 for Allen as heretofore. The Robertson-Smith contest was set for trial yesterday in the Supreme Court. A decision may be expected the first of next week.

The Owensboro Inquirer, which generally entertains views peculiarly its own, is about the only paper we have seen that has had a good word for the present Superintendent of Public Instruction, who has so signally failed to fill his office to the satisfaction of the people. There is much better material for Superintendent than Prof. Fickett—some of it in our own district—and we still hold to the opinion that a change is imperatively demanded, if we would have a capable and efficient officer at the head of our school system.

The protracted dead-lock in the Democratic caucus of the Tennessee Legislature was broken Monday night and Gen. W. B. Bate, the retiring Governor nominated for Senator. The break occurred on the 69th ballot, when two of Marks' leaders went over to Bate, stating that they wanted a nomination without further delay. Others began to change and Gov. Marks was escorted into the room and formally withdrew in a patriotic speech. Bate had been leading from the first in the caucus and his nomination was made unanimous. His selection gives general satisfaction. The Legislature in joint session formally elected him on Tuesday for a term of six years from March 4th.

A TEXAS TRAIN ROBBED.

Eight Armed Robbers Boarded a Texas & Pacific Train, Intimidated the Trainmen, and Plundered the Express and Mail Cars of a Large Sum.

FORT WORTH, TEX., Jan. 23.—One of the most daring and successful train robberies ever committed in this State was perpetrated by eight armed and masked men two miles east of Gordon, on the Texas & Pacific railroad, between 2 and 3 a. m., to-day. As the regular passenger train pulled out from Gordon for the east, two masked men jumped on the engine, one on each side. The engineer, John Bosquet, turned to them and asked:

"Where are you fellows going?"

"Just going to take a little ride," answered one of them.

"You will not ride on here," said Bosquet.

"I guess we will," said the man, and in an instant the engineer was covered with two pistols pointed directly at his head. He was ordered to pull ahead, which he did until he reached the coal chute at the trestle bridge, something over a mile east of Gordon. Here the engineer discovered that obstructions had been placed across the track, and he was ordered by the two men, who still held their pistols in hand, to pull up. As soon as the train stopped six more men, all armed, appeared and ordered the engineer to take his pick and hammer and break in the door of the express car. He refused at first, but was induced to do so by threats of instant death in case of continued refusal. After the door had been forced the robbers entered and went through the safe, taking everything they could find. The amount of the loss could not be ascertained exactly, but report places the amount at sums ranging from $8,000 to $15,000.

Having finished the work in the express car, the robbers went to the mail car and made a demand on the train agent for all the money or valuables he had. Thinking that the robbers would not dare to molest the United States mail, the agent was very cool, and told the robbers that they were in the wrong place, and that he was a United States mail man. This declaration had no effect on the robbers, who told the official that unless he complied with their demands he would soon be a dead man. There were thirty registered mail packages in the car. While the robbers were going through the express matter the mail agent had secured thirty-two of them and only gave up twenty-eight to the robbers. The passengers were not molested. A sheriff who was on the train exchanged shots with the robbers without effect. There were also negro soldiers on the train. The value of the mail packages cannot be estimated.

Bate's Thirty Votes.

The Banner's comment on Bate's thirty votes was, in the end, a startling significance. Bate had thirty sticking votes. John Littleton said "the Democrat party has gone to the devil for thirty years." When the committee informed Bate of his nomination he, by accident, was standing in front of room No. 30, Maxwell House. When he started to the Capitol Gen. Thurman, who is 30 years old, could not find the driver, and jumped upon back No. 30 and drove Gov. Bate to the Capitol. Fort, the Chairman, and Odium the Secretary of the caucus were each 30 years old. When Bate was first inaugurated Governor he had been married thirty years to the day. Bate was nominated by the caucus thirty minutes past 9 o'clock. Bate made a thirty minutes speech, and thirty-pound cannons were fired in honor of his nomination. It does seem that there is luck in the number thirty. Twelve years ago to-day Johnson defeated Bate, and he was the only one of the candidates who went in and congratulated Johnson on his election.—Nashville American.

They are having a high old time in the New Jersey Legislature. The Democrats have 40 members, the Republicans 38 and the Labor men 2 on joint ballot. The Republicans control the Senate and have delayed the organization of that body for the last two weeks, to prevent a ballot for United States Senator. The House proceeded to take a ballot Tuesday despite this fact and 30 votes were cast for Abbott. The 9 votes in the Senate would give him 39, or two short of enough. Baird, the Democratic speaker of the House, refuses to caucus and declined to vote with his party associates. With his vote and one of the Labor men the Democrats could elect a Senator. Baird says he will not vote for any candidate not a Democrat, but refuses to go into the caucus to select a candidate. The Senate adjourned from Tuesday till to-day and in the meanwhile the Democrats will continue to ballot from day to day, the Democratic Senators joining with the Assembly. The situation is worse mixed up, if possible, than it is in Indiana.

KENTUCKY KNOWLEDGE.

Mrs. W. H. Miller, aged 62, fell dead of apoplexy, at Louisville.

Abner Crump, an old negro 70 years old, fell dead of heart disease, in Daviess county.

Mrs. Ben Hardin Helem has been recommended for re-appointment as postmistress at Elizabethtown.

Sam'l. Peters was run over and killed by a train at Milldale, near Covington, Tuesday.

Chas. McCloskey's barn at Bardonia was burned by an incendiary and nine horses were destroyed Monday.

The Albion Lumber company at Riceale, Muhlenberg county, has shut down its mills on account of mortgages.

A boy named John Jackson touched a match to a dynamite cartridge at Stanford to see what it would do. It took off three of his fingers.

Daniel Yeager, col., who was cut and shot at Central City Christmas eve by Chas. Harris, col., has died of his wounds and Harris has been arrested.

Robt. Johnson is in jail at Stanford charged with having two wives. He denies that he has ever been married to No. 2, but claims that he merely "took up" with her.

C. M. White, of Lexington, has bought the pooling privileges of the Latonia race track for the fall and winter meetings, paying therefor $53,750.

The negroes of Augusta will attempt to elect four of the eight councilmen to be chosen the coming spring. They have already put out a ticket with four of their race on it.

A large rock fell on the C. & O. track near Central City in a deep cut and the eastbound passenger train was saved from wreck by a ten-year-old boy who discovered it and signaled the train just in time. The passengers made up a purse for him.

Louisville, Ky., January 24.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sperling, living on Fetter avenue, were taking their two-year-old infant to the St. Louis cemetery for interment when they were startled with peculiar noises issuing from the coffin. At first the parents were dumfounded, but the father placing his ear against the coffin lid, heard the baby cries of what he thought to be his dead child. He tried to force open the lid, but in vain. Placing the coffin on his shoulders he hurried to a neighboring grocery, and with a hatchet beat the lid. The child, with outstretched arms and with the faintest cries, held its tiny hands out to him. The baby was taken back home, and though very ill, is not beyond the hope of recovery.

The strangest feature of the case is that the child was supposed to have died early yesterday morning. A physician pronounced it dead. Since the moment of its supposed demise the body had been closely watched by the grief-stricken parents, and no sign of life was evident. It got icy cold, and was as stiff as a corpse. There were no signs of breathing and the eyes were set as if in death. Several doctors, who have been attracted to the case by its peculiarity, seem to think the child was in a trance. The funeral procession was near the cemetery, and if the cries of the infant had not been so timely heard, it would have, in a few minutes, been buried. The attending friends gathered around the now joyous parents, and the funeral cortege was turned back.

INDIANA MIRACLES.

Alleged Cures Performed by a Faith-Cure Minister in Benton County.

FOWLDER, IND., Jan. 20.—Some time since there came to Gibson township, Benton county, a gentleman named Merrill, claiming to be a minister of the faith cure. He began preaching in Shiloh church, and soon attracted large audiences to hear the strange doctrine. He claimed to be able to heal the sick, cause the deaf to hear, cast out devils—in fact, cure all ailments that the body is heir to. He presented his views so ably that numbers of afflicted ones, who had been diseased in body for years, became ardent believers in his doctrine and confessed themselves benefited in every case, and in some permanent cures seem to have been effected. His mode of procedure is as follows: First, he annoys the patient with oil, then, placing his hands upon the head, he offers prayer that the patient be given the faith to believe the cure

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC
Strengthens the Blood, Purifies the System, and Gives New Vigor.

Dr. J. C. Brown, of New York, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best tonic I have ever used. It is especially beneficial in cases of indigestion, and in all debilitated conditions. I have used it on the system. It has cured me of indigestion, and I can say, 'I was completely cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.'"

One of Mr. C. W. Rea's children was dangerously ill the first of the week.

Ward's Week.

Hopkinsville may not for years have another opportunity to see fine acting as will be afforded her next week. The appearance of the great tragedian, Frederick Ward, in seven of the leading plays of the day is an event of no small importance to an city like ours. Owensboro, Henderson and other cities that have even more population than Hopkinsville are availing us the good fortune that has brought such an exhibition of histrionic art to our doors. In the great characters of Virginia, Richelieu, Galba and Richard, Mr. Ward scarcely has an equal on the stage. In the first especially, which will be the opening play Monday night, he is unsurpassable. Those who cannot see him in all of his characters should by all means see Virginia and Richard on Monday and Friday nights. Not that those plays will be especially superior to others to be presented, but because Mr. Ward's name has become identified with these characters and those who see him in them will see him at his best. His personation of Damon on Saturday night is also a sublime piece of acting and calculated to inspire the purest and loftiest sentiments of friendship. We should be greatly disappointed if our citizens fail to give Mr. Ward a warm welcome and crowded houses. Reserved seats for each night are now on sale at $1.00. Matinee 75 cents.

A half-dozen business houses were destroyed by fire at Frankfort, Mo.

Lum Stacker, col., was put in jail yesterday at noon to serve out a balance of $3 due on an old fine for gambling.

The young people had a pleasant entertainment at Mr. J. B. Dade's hospitable home on 9th street, last Monday night.

Rev. Jno. W. Lewis, of the Methodist church, is helping Rev. W. C. Hayes, of Madisonville, in a protracted meeting at that place.

Spencer Diuguid, col., was given a severe beating by his wife the other night, after which she called in the police and had him sent to jail.

Mr. Florence Abbott, a popular young grocer, and Miss Lizzie Bollin were married at the Catholic church, Clarksville, Tuesday evening, with much ceremony.

Mr. K. Twyman has sold a lot 230 x 80 feet on South Virginia street to Mr. John Combs, late of Crofton, $400 being the price paid. Mr. Combs will build in the spring.

"Helen Lakeman" is being commended on all sides. It is a thrillingly interesting story and so far as we have heard our patrons are greatly pleased with this new feature.

Mr. M. B. King, of Church Hill, inserts an advertisement in this issue for the benefit of those who want to buy thoroughbred Berkshire hogs, Cotswold and Southdown sheep.

A masquerade party was given by Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Bledsoe at their residence, on Jessup Avenue, last Monday night, which was enjoyed hugely by the very large crowd who attended.

Seventy-eight season tickets nearly a fifth of the main floor seats—were sold for the dramatic festival at $5.00 each. The single seats were put on sale yesterday and 75 were sold before 9 o'clock A. M.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Fairview Circuit will be held at Vaughan's Chapel Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 29 and 30. Rev. R. F. Hayes, Presiding Elder, will be present and conduct the exercises.

It is to be hoped that the young ladies, and the older ones too for that matter, who attend the dramatic festival next week will leave their high hats at home. Many ladies have already signified their intention to go without hats and give those behind them an opportunity to see the plays.

The Winfree-Anderson contest, which was submitted to the court Monday, was still undecided when we went to press. Judge Grace is writing out his judgment in the case and going about it very deliberately. The opinion prevails almost universally that the case will be decided in Winfree's favor.

Dr. H. M. Sherman, by special request, is making visits to some of the precincts in the country for the benefit of those who are unable to visit him in the city. He has just made a successful visit to Crofton, and on Feb. 15th, and 16th, will be in Fairview, at the residence of Mr. Richard Vaughn.

Manager Rodgers is besieged with letters of inquiry from surrounding towns from persons who expect to attend the dramatic festival next week. There will be a large number of visitors in the city and Mr. Ward will meet with a very cordial reception. The indications are that he will have crowded houses every night.

A sensational canard to the effect that Sheriff T. B. Pannell, of Muhlenberg county, had been killed by a desperado named Hopkins, appeared in several papers the first of the week. Mr. Pannell is alive and says he has not been in the locality where the alleged killing was reported to have occurred for two weeks. The story originated in the fertile brain of some over-enterprising correspondent.

FIRE AT THE ASYLUM.

A Dangerous Fire Wednesday Morning.

The Western Kentucky Lunatic Asylum one mile east of this city came near being the scene of a destructive conflagration at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. A fire originated in the attic or fourth story of the east wing of the main building, which is occupied by female patients.

Three or four women were in the attic at work changing the shucks in some mattresses and it is supposed that one of them was smoking a pipe and dropped a spark into the inflammable material on the floor. The first known of the fire was when the women ran down the steps screaming fire. In an instant the alarm had spread to every part of the premises and twenty-five employees and trusty patients rushed to the scene of danger. As a precautionary measure, barrels of water are kept always on hand in the various attics to use in case of fire and this fact is all that averted a terrible fire similar to that of 1859 when the Asylum was burned.

In fifteen or twenty minutes the flames were entirely subdued and every spark extinguished. The fire burned through the floor and ceiling below and the carpets in the ward below were ruined by water and ashes. The hole burned is about five feet in diameter, though a much larger space was torn up in fighting the flames and to be certain that no fire was left. The damages will amount to about $100 which is a total loss, as there is no insurance on the main building. The roof is not damaged at all. The windows were down and there was but little air stirring, so that the fire burned slowly. The employees and a number of the male patients behaved gallantly and with great presence of mind. The water was thrown on with buckets, the supply in the barrels at hand being ample.

The Asylum is provided with 1000 feet of hose which can be attached to the large engine or to connections at points in the main building when necessary, but it has never been found necessary to use the engine for this purpose. The fire this week is the first one at the Asylum for 28 years that has caused any damage. Once or twice before alarms have been given, but no harm was done. There was no special confusion amongst the patients and no injuries of any kind were sustained by any one, nor were there any escapes.

A Bride's Death.

The death of Mrs. Chas. B. Phipps, which occurred at Mr. T. L. Smith's on 7th street, on the 22nd inst, was an event of peculiar sadness. Mr. Phipps who lives in Dodge City, Kansas, returned to his former home a few weeks ago and on Dec. 27th was married to Miss Birdie Drake, of Muhlenberg county. They came a few days later to this city to visit Mr. Phipps, brother-in-law, Mr. Smith and about the 10th of the present month the fair young bride was stricken with a fatal attack of rheumatism which resulted as stated above. She came to the city a joyous happy bride, but before her honeymoon had passed away her corpse was returned to the home she left under such auspicious circumstances and buried in her family burying ground. We deeply sympathize with the young husband in his great sorrow and bereavement.

Death of an Old Citizen.

Mr. Edward Edwards, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Hopkinsville, died yesterday shortly after noon. He had been sick for a week with pneumonia. Mr. Edwards was in the 74th year of his age and had been a resident of this city for twenty years. He was a leading and consistent member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church and his funeral will be preached to-day by Rev. A. C. Biddle, his pastor. He leaves a wife and two grown daughters and a large circle of friends to lament his departure.

Notice.

We have now in stock 3,000 bushels of the finest northern seed oats, at low figures. We want to buy clover seed; will pay spot cash for them. Read our advertisement in to-day's paper.

May Pyle, Mr. A. W. Pyle's little 2-year-old daughter, came very near being seriously burned while playing in the fire last Monday. She was burning paper and the flames lapped out and were in the act of being communicated to her sleeve when discovered. Her hand was painfully burned.

A dance was given by Mr. and Mrs. Silas Woodbridge at their residence near Bennetts town, last Tuesday night. A very large crowd attended and dancing was indulged in until a late hour. Music was furnished by a good string band. It was decided by all who attended, that it was the dance of the season in that neighborhood.

Bryant Morrison, col., was arrested and lodged in jail yesterday charged with stealing about $60 worth of goods from D. M. Taylor. The property consisted of a value full of clothes and about nine gallons of whisky. The value was found in Morrison's possession. The articles were taken from Taylor's late stand on 7th street on the night of the 20th. Morrison has served one term in the penitentiary and is in a fair way to get another.

CALEDONIA, KY.

January 21, 1887.

ED. SOUTH KENTUCKIAN:
Married on Jan. 20, at the residence of James Richardson, Trigg county, Ky., Mr. R. A. Russell to Mrs. Alice Beasley.

Mr. Russell has recently purchased of Mr. Merritt Cox his farm, and has moved to our neighborhood. Mrs. Beasley, the bride, is the daughter of Mr. Richardson, the County Surveyor of Trigg county. She was married first to Mr. Beasley of Lafayette, where she lived for two years. At the death of her husband she returned to her father's, where she has been since living. They married at 1 o'clock P. M. and immediately proceeded to the groom's home, where a number of their most intimate friends greeted them. The evening was passed most delightfully. The supper prepared by Mrs. Chilton was sumptuous, and profuse were the compliments paid this royal hostess.

The groom was dressed in full regulation costume and bore the outward sign of an inward joy, his countenance beaming with self-satisfaction. He looked every inch like a man not afraid of life's battle. No cloud could be too dark; no wave too cold; no misfortune too grave for him to stand to his colors. Proud and self-confident as he is, worthy and noble as he has been, yet we bid him God speed, and earnestly pray that this unspeakable joy, this infinite happiness may bloom and blossom on through storm and sunshine, until they both enter where God's light dwelleth forever.

The bride is one of the handsomest women in all this country. She belongs to that type of beauty that does not fade, but retains its pristine bloom "Even when the summer days are past."

And is her beauty all, her accomplishments belong to womanhood, rather than the semblance of "frills and flounces." As we looked at her, her countenance all beaming with the radiance of a pure woman's love, we thought that indeed contentment should in her have its full meaning. To her we say: Standing at the entrance of (I trust) a long life, may you "act well your part" and with unerring finger point with one hand up the heights of success, joy and happiness, whilst the other clings to the man, to whom before God, you have pledged your faith and offered your love.

Now my blessings are let no tear save of joy, no heart throbs save of tender paths, no difference save strong and tender love ever exist between you. Let truth, grace and love characterize every action, and as your aims are one on earth let them be one for Heaven.

In behalf of the entire community we heartily welcome bride and groom to our neighborhood. Another link has been made to bring us closer together. Thrice welcome.

NEIGHBOR.

Mr. Peter Tribble will offer his farm of 143 acres, one mile south of the city, for sale at public auction on the premises at 10:30 to-morrow morning. He will sell in whole or in part. The land just beyond the house is the finest piece of land for a race course to be found within five miles of the city.

To the farmers who are disposing of their tobacco, we would say that if you want to invest two dollars where you will get value received, come around and take the KENTUCKIAN for a year, and get more reading matter than you will by taking any other paper.
